On March 15-16, 2011, the 6th New Zealand Mudsnail Conference was held in Moscow, Idaho. Co-sponsored by the USFWS, this event brought together scientists and managers from across the West to share new information on NZ mudsnail biology, risk assessment, monitoring, and control methods. The existing NZ mudsnail national management plan served as a key frame of reference for discussion sessions. This presentation will briefly summarize the conference highlights and discuss implications for the existing national plan (which is significantly outdated) and associated opportunities to revive a national website and coordinating committee.
